One-Week (Residential) Short Term Training Program on

The Compassionate Educator:

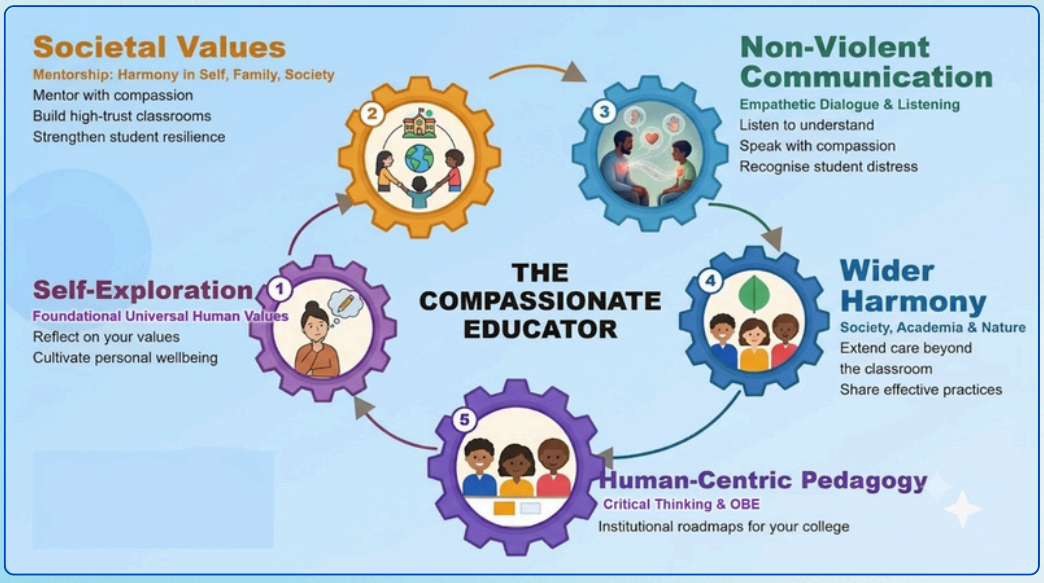

Empowering Faculty for Personal and Student Well-being

18 - 23 January 2027

Program Overview:

True student well-being and mentoring begin with the educator. This program offers a transformative space for faculty members at higher education institutions to ground their academic roles in human-centric principles. The program equips faculty with practical tools to cultivate personal well-being and practice compassionate communication. By integrating these practices into education, faculty members are better equipped to support students not only in their academic performance, but in their overall mental, emotional, and personal flourishing.

By embedding human-centric practices into day-to-day academic interactions, faculty develop the methodologies needed to recognize student distress, provide structured guidance, and build long-term student resilience. The curriculum combines peer-to-peer collaboration frameworks, evidence-based case analyses, and practical resource tool-kits to ensure immediate application in the classroom. Ultimately, faculty members optimize their professional capacity, while higher education institutions establish a stable, supportive academic environment that drives student well-being, open dialogue, and sustainable institutional performance.

Content of the STTP Program:

The program structures its learning across five core modules, as detailed in the bullet points below. Engagement is deepened through experiential team discussions using hands-on activities, journaling, and art to foster metacognition. Finally, participants share effective practices for faculty and student wellbeing while developing actionable implementation roadmaps for their home institutions.

- Module-1: Self-Awareness and Inner Well-being: Exploring personal harmony, stress resilience, and self-reflection as the non-negotiable foundation before guiding the students.
- Module-2: Living Values in Academia: Moving from theoretical understanding to embodying the values in classroom and lab.
- Module-3: The Language of Empathy: Observing without judgment, identifying feelings and underlying needs, and transforming reactive classroom dynamics into connection.
- Module-4: Creating Spaces of Trust: Moving from "fixing" student problems to truly hearing them. Practical techniques for building mentoring environments where students feel safe to open up.
- Module-5: Mentoring the Whole Student: Navigating Academic and Emotional Challenges; Addressing student anxiety, peer pressure, and purpose through values-led guidance.
